Performance Credits

Joey began drumming at the age of five as a member of his family's road show, lead by his grandfather, Atlanta Country Hall of Fame member, Bud Mote. Along the way Joey began singing, and playing guitar, bass, keyboard and saxophone.

After graduating from high school in his hometown, Douglasville, Ga. he ventured to Nashville, where he had the good fortune to experience performing with country greats, including Johnny Paycheck. He enjoyed local success as a member of a hometown group called Southern Touch, then became interested in the craft of songwriting, and joined the Nashville Songwriter Association International (NSAI), where he served as a member on the Board of Directors.

Joey has several songwriting awards to his credit, and scored his first major recording on V-Tone Records. His song, "Two Old Cars" and "No Girls Allowed" co-written with Chip Martin and Tim Smith, was recorded by Glenn Kearney, "Two Old Cars" being released as the first single in May of 2003. Joey has performed with up and coming artists throughout the southeast, sharing the bill with Tracy Byrd, Rush Low, Gary Allen, Phil Vassar and Lonestar. He has also collaborated with members of Confederate Railroad in the recording studio as well as live performances as well as co writing with Country Super Star Zac Brown.. He started his own company, J&P Productions which includes artist booking and recording studio services. In 2006 Joey was elected President of the "Georgia Music Industry Association" (GMIA). After performing with "John Berry "Doug Stone" and "Confederate Railroad" in 2009 Joey founded Georgia's only Branson style show The Outpost Opry Variety Show that features Atlanta's best talent along with the son of legendary Conway Twitty Michael Twitty and Grammy winner Becky Hobbs. Joey created a comedy Character by the name of William H. Bass in which he performs in the variety show. The Outpost Opry Variety Show is still in production and has performed nationwide.

Since 1987 Joey also spent time in the pro wrestling field under the name J.J. Boone. In 2015 Joey teamed up with WWE Hall of Famer Robert Gibson of "The Rock-n-Roll Express" and created All Pro Championship Wrestling Academy. Joey still makes some celebrity appearances in the ring on occasion.

With his experience on camera as a pro wrestler and Musician in 2017 Joey started studying acting.
